United Jewish Appeal
Reconstituted For 1941
With Goal $25,000,000

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency NEW YORK.—Bowling to widespread demands, fund-raising leaders have signed an agreement to reconstitute the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees and Overseas Needs as the 1941 fund-raising instrument of the three major Jewish relief agencies and have announced a goal of $25,000,000.

The agreement was signed at a meeting of officials of the Joint Distribution Committee and United Palestine Appeal, held at the United Jewish Appeal offices, which culminated several weeks of negotiations. The agreement terminate independent campaigns which had been initiated by the JDC, UPA and National Refugee Service.

The UJA made public the basis of distribution of funds contained in the agreement. Of the first $8,800,000, the JDC will receive $4,275,000, the UPA $2,525,000 and the NRS $2,000,000. The balance of the funds raised is to be distributed by an Allotment Committee to be constituted in the same manner as in 1940.

A statement stressed that the action was taken in response to "the overwhelming desire of American Jewry to establish a union of forces in this critical period." It declared that "the officers of these three organizations recognize that the need for funds is so pressing and the amounts required so great that unity in raising funds is essential."

Furore Aroused By Wheeler Smear Of Jews In Talk

By Jewish Telegraphic Agency

NEW YORK—With the speeches of Senators Burton K. Wheeler and Rufus Holman introducing a hint of anti-Semitism for the first time into the debate on the lend-lease bill, leading American newspapers have denounced the Nazi-style references to "international bankers" and the emphasis on Jewish names.

The New York Post declared editorially that Senator Wheeler's speech had reached "levels sickeningly below mere sordid politics." It said that Wheeler's remarks about Rothschilds, Sassoons and Warburgs "was in the approved pattern set by Father Coughlin as he worked up to his outspoken anti-Semitism."

The Philadelphia Record editorially spoke of Hitler's "undoubted gratitude for Wheeler's help." The Newark Star-Ledger said: "Senators Wheeler, Nye and Holman... have given voice to Nazi propaganda slogans and have sought to inflame un-American passions. Senator Reynolds has coupled his opposition to the lease-lend bill with vicious and untruthful attacks

Methodist hospital after an automobile accident.

The Junior Hadassah organization has made definite plans for their "Silver Dollar" dance April 20 in the B'nai B'rith lodge rooms. Miss Eileen Kaplan is chairman of the party and Miss Dorothy Zweig and Miss Doris Lakin were appointed co-chairmen. The next meeting will be March 18.

upon our alien population that recalls the savage racialism of Hitler." The New York Times criticized "Wheeler's alarms about international bankers."

The newspaper PM said: "The stock Nazi charge that Jewish international bankers are responsible for Europe's war has now been adopted by lend-lease foes in the Senate making a last-ditch attack against F. D. R.'s British-aid program."

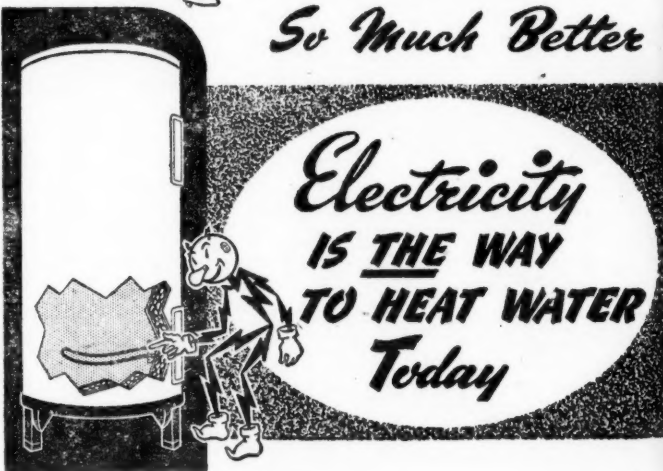

Senator Wheeler, in a radio speech, said: "Now we find these same international bankers with their friends, the royal refugees, and with the Sassoons of the Orient and with the Rothschilds and the Warburgs of Europe in another theme song... 'Our investments in India, Africa and Europe must be preserved. Save democracy.'"

Senator Holman, on the floor of the Senate, asserted: "I have always deplored Hitler's ambitions as a conqueror. But he broke the control of these internationalists over the common people of Germany. It would be a good idea if the control of the international bankers over the common people of England was broken, and good if it was broken over the wages and savings of the common people of the United States."

It was recalled that on Feb. 21, when followers of Joe McWilliams attempted to inject anti-Semitism into an isolationist rally in New York, Senator Wheeler rebuked the effort, declaring: "I abhor intolerance, whether it be predicated upon color, race or religion."

AL SEGAL Speaks on Being A Baptist

A BAPTIST lady writes to invite me to come and join her church and be safe from the afflictions that keep falling so dreadfully on Jews. She asks me to come over some Sunday and learn for myself how nice and peaceful it is in a Baptist church. (Baptists never have to worry about pogroms.)

The lady feels sure that once I look over her proposition I will accept it for my family's sake.

"My family have been Baptists nearly a hundred years," she says, as if to assure me that being a Baptist isn't like being a Jew who doesn't know from today till tomorrow what's going to happen to him. Being a Baptist, she seems to say, is like living in a safe old homestead on which the mortgage has been paid off.

The Baptist lady says she feels free to invite me to join her church because she likes my understanding attitude toward Jesus as expressed occasionally in this column.

I am grateful to her for offering me sanctuary in her church, what with the way the wild winds are blowing about my poor old head. Her church which I pass by every day looks so snug. I noticed that the other evening they gave a chicken dinner there.

Yet, if I joined her church, could I feel at ease in my conscience while I left all other Jews out in the cold and enjoyed the warmth of the safe Baptist communion? I am not exactly a person who enjoys being a martyr but you just can't run away from your family when the house is about to be foreclosed by the sheriff.

But I guess it must be very comfortable among the Baptists. I could become a Baptist and that would be about the end of the matter. I wouldn't even be spoken of as Segal the Baptist. I would be a man who would be judged entirely by the merits or the defects of his character.

The fact that as a Baptist I prefer to be baptized by total immersion would not reduce me in the least in the esteem of those who believe in baptism by sprinkling. My preference for the baptismal tank would not set me aside as a person in the least different from the advocates of the baptismal font. If the matter was brought up at all it would be only in a humorous vein.

(I have in mind how as a Jew I am a marked man because of differences that are mostly imaginary.)

As a Baptist I could be a scalawag with none of my sins being visited upon the whole Baptist church. I wouldn't be described as that Baptist scoundrel Segal. For it would be widely felt that the great majority of Baptists were very decent people and why should they all be damned on account of one heel?

I could go to look for a job and no one would find fault in me for being a Baptist. The Baptist faith is one of those approved by all industrialists who make a practice of asking applicants what their religion is.

Yes, being a Baptist is a happy identity.

Nobody ever makes speeches against the Baptists. As a Baptist, I would not open my paper with trembling hands. What are they saying against Baptists today? With a light heart I could hurry at once to the back page where they keep L'I Abner and Superman.

As a Baptist among the Baptists I wouldn't always be talking about the matter of being a Baptist. "Do you think it will ever be good for us Baptists?" "What future is there for us Baptists?" No! Nothing like that. Being a Baptist needn't be heavy on a man's mind until Sunday and even on Sunday he may decide to take an automobile ride instead.

(I know how it feels to be a Jew whom the pressure of dreadful events makes conscious of what he is every hour.)

In my social convocations as Baptist the conversation wouldn't be of Baptists at all. I could speak of the mileage I get out of my machine. "Yes, she's doing fourteen miles on a gallon." I could speak fully of my being an A-1 refrigerator salesman, if I were a refrigerator salesman. "If there's one prospect left to be sold I'll be the one to sell her."

As a Baptist I could give the freest expression to my political opinions. I could say yes, I'm for the lend-lease bill and people would say either that I am a true patriot who has the best interests of the country at heart or that I am a mistaken man who doesn't know what he's talking about.

Nobody would say that's Segal, the Baptist war-monger. He's a blood-thirsty Baptist.

(Currently some ladies have been picketing the capitol in Washington against the lend-lease bill, blaming everything on Congressman Sol Bloom of New York.)

In the comfortable and influential state of a Baptist I could do something for the Jews. I could go among the Gentiles and try to make Christians out of them.

"We Christians," I would say, "cannot also be anti-Semites. The two are contradictory. We can't tell lies against and revile our neighbors and be Christians at the same time. It is a false pretense of Christianity. It is against all the teaching of our Lord."

So here I sit with the Baptist lady's invitation in my hand. Or, rather, here I hang between the calm, tepid water of the baptismal tank and the turbulent waves that make Jewish life endlessly precarious.

On which side shall I fall?

At this moment it comes to me that I might please Hitler by becoming a Baptist, anyway. If he came I might say: "Mr. Hitler, you have me wrong. I'm a Baptist," but the storm troopers nevertheless would bash me on the head for the sake of my father, my grandfather and my great-grandfathers all the way down to those of my ancestors who served as Levites in the temple. "No, Segal, you can't get away with that. You are a Jew."

Thus I would be reminded that nothing was washed away by immersion.

I guess I had better keep on being Jewish.

Louisville Provides A Hearty Welcome For Jewish Soldiers

Special LOUISVILLE, Ky.—The Louisville Jewish community's hospitality program for service men is in full swing, under the direction of the Louisville branch of the Jewish Welfare Board, which is made up of representatives of Jewish organizations throughout the city.

The chief features are:

1. Saturday night dances at the Y. M. H. A., reminiscent of World War days, for all men in uniform.
2. Sunday night suppers at the Y. M. H. A., with a different organization as host each week. The B'nai B'rith was sponsor of the first, held March 2, and the B'rith Sholom Sisterhood was sponsor the second week.
3. Provision of dormitory facilities for sixty men in the Y. M. H. A. for week-end visits to the city by servicemen.
4. Conducting of Sabbath eve services at Fort Knox by Louisville's rabbis. The series was inaugurated last Friday night, March 7, by Rabbi Solomon N. Bazell. Each week another rabbi will conduct the services until a full-time Jewish chaplain is assigned at Fort Knox by the military authorities.

5. Sunday afternoon tea dances at the Y. M. H. A.

Louisville's program is believed to be one of the first in the country to get into full swing, just as in the early part of the World War the Louisville Y. M. H. A. led the rest of the nation in providing social and recreational facilities by taking care of the men stationed at Fort Knox.

Louis Cohen, who played such a big part in directing the program in World War days, is executive chairman of the present committee. Other officers are Mrs. Lawrence Grauman, vice chairman; Lawrence L. Koch, general secretary of the Y. M. H. A., secretary, and Lewis D. Cole, treasurer.

The executive committee of the Louisville group includes all of the city's rabbis, Charles W. Morris, Julien Greenfield, Alexander W. Erlin, Irwin Hertzman, Mrs. William Sexter, Mrs. Morris Koch, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Resnick, Mrs. Louis Cohen, Mrs. Herman G. Handmaker, Miss Ronetta Mayer, Mrs. Sam Wittenbaum, Clarence F. Judah, Mrs. Alex Hertzman, Mr. Isadore Levenstein, Mrs. Sophie Greiver, Dr. Joseph M. Frehling, Sidney H. Appel and Alvin Linker.

Another feature of the Louisville program is making membership facilities of the Y. M. H. A. available to service men without charge.

Numerous subcommittees have been appointed to handle details in connection with the functioning of the general committee. The chairmen of these various groups are: Finance, Sidney H. Appel; religious services, all rabbis; public relations and community cooperation (coordinating the program with activities of other civic groups along the same line), Dr. Joseph M. Frehling; soldiers' personal problems, Alexander W. Erlin; dormitory (providing week-end accommodations at the Y. M. H. A. for visiting service men), Ale Bornstein; statistical (keeping records of the Jewish men assisted or participating in Louisville activities and compiling data on all Louisville Jewish young men entering military service), Bernard S. Goldstein, and men's smoker, Julien Greenfield.

Women's activities are being coordinated under the direction of Mrs. Lawrence Grauman as vice chairman of the city-wide committee, with Mrs. Morris Koch as subchairman. The women's committees include: Entertainment and supper, Mrs. Jacob Levy, Mrs. Leon Hirsch, Mrs. Louis Newman and Mrs. Max Hyman; home hospitality, Mrs. S. T. Fish, Mrs. Harry Resnick, Mrs. J. J. The Editor's Chair:

I need to convince someone that Indianapolis has its quota of anti-Semitic incidences which need thinking and correction by a fully-supported and qualified communal body, so I'm asking you readers who know by actual experience of discrimination by firms in matters of employment, of anti-Semitic utterances by people in positions of importance, of any pamphlets and other anti-Semitic material which is being passed around, to write to me. You'll have to give me your name and address and all the facts at your disposal; but I promise you that your name or the material will never be made public.

It may be true, as some contend, that Indianapolis has no problem of any significance in regards to anti-Semitic incidents, but from the many instances of attempts to spread hate against the Jews that have been called to my attention in the past few years, I know that this is a mistaken belief. But what I need now is a group of these occurrences of recent vintage; that is, within the past three or four months, so I'll appreciate it if you'll write to me.

It may be that the percentages of division may not be made public by the reconstructed United Jewish Appeal, so in case the figures are not released, here they are:

The Joint Distribution Committee will receive $4,275,000 of the first $9,250,000 raised; the United Palestine Appeal, $2,225,000, and the National Refugee Service, $2,000,000. As to funds raised over this amount, an allocation committee will make the division according to its estimate of the needs at the time.

Freedom of the Press

Tells Work of Local Army Committee

To the Editor,

My attention has been called to an editorial which appeared in The Jewish Post under date of Feb. 28, entitled "Soldiers Should Get Blanket Invitations."

As chairman of the local Army and Navy committee, I thought you would like to have some of the facts in connection with the matter.

The Army and Navy committee, as you know, works in co-ordination with the Jewish Welfare Board of New York which has been recognized by the government as the official Jewish agency in the field of service to men in the army and

Post Gets Backing In Campaign For Elections

THE POST'S campaign for more democracy in the election of officers of Jewish organizations has won its most important advocate.

One of the leading men in the Indianapolis lodge and unquestionably a leader in the Indiana-Kentucky State Association of B'nai B'rith, this new protagonist for freer elections has asked The Post to urge the abolition entirely of nominating committees both in the Indianapolis lodge and in the state association. For reasons which are obvious, this leader has requested that his name not be used, although he indicated that he would throw the weight of his influence behind any move to eliminate nominating committees in the two organizations.

This leader pointed to the proceedings in the recent election in Columbus, Ohio, lodge, where amid heated but friendly rivalry three men, all nominated from the floor, fought spirited campaigns for election to the presidency.

The advantage of this free method of nomination are obvious. The method eliminates rule by cliques. It prevents the nomination of men who have to be persuaded to accept office. It removes the possibility of antagonism by individuals who might feel that a nominating committee was "stacked" against them. And, of course, it is more democratic.

Ain't It So

THE united Jewish Appeal will function again this year. "Peace, it's wonderful".

Slomovitz Criticizes

AMERICAN freedom permits criticism of the highest by the lowest, but even this practice has some limits, approved and made part of our system by plain ordinary judgment. So that when Philip Slomovitz, editor of The Detroit Jewish Chronicle, criticizes The New Palestine, edited by Carl Alpert, as "a poor imitation of a party organ", common decency does not permit this outrageous remark to go unnoticed. For in truth, Mr. Alpert is to Mr. Slomovitz as an editor is to a copy boy, and this should not be taken as an insult to that honorable and noble position of copy boy which has given the nation some of its best newspapermen.

Mr. Slomovitz complains of "the reduction of The New Palestine from a serious journal," which even if it were true, would be no complaint at all. There are thousands of "serious" journals that spend most of their living time between the wastebasket and the furnace, and if Mr. Slomovitz is going to point out that this is no criterion of their worth, then let The Post point out that The New Palestine is the organ of all the Z. O. A., and not of just the few. But the original charge is not valid, and should not be permitted to stand. Any journal of any organization has a trying problem in attempting to satisfy the particular news that "must" be printed and at the same time including enough material that is of intrinsic interest on its own, to thwart that inclination of most members to throw the publication into that wastebasket without turning over one page.

Mr. Slomovitz has a perfect right to criticize but he should realize that indiscriminate condemnation is the quickest road to reader incredulity and that if he could do as good a job with The Detroit Jewish Chronicle as Mr. Alpert is doing with The New Palestine, he would have as good a paper as The Jewish Advocate, of Boston, which is the publication which Mr. Alpert managed before he accepted his present position.

Wise Leadership

NAMING of William Schloss to head the 1941 drive of the Jewish Welfare Fund has significance over and above the fact that a capable business man is prepared to devote his valuable time to raising funds for Jewish needs.

Mr. Schloss comes from the younger leadership of the city's Jewish community. He served last year in the capacity as assistant chairman, and this year has been elevated to the chairmanship, a procedure which indicates the wise management of the Indianapolis Jewish leaders.

The Indianapolis Jewish community has attained a position of national importance, and without fanfare has given to the nation's Jewish community some of its best thinkers and some of its finest examples of community accomplishment. That this rearing of leadership should be so is not mere chance. That the senior leadership as indicated in Louis J. Borinstein, Samuel Mueller and Isidore Feibleman is giving over its position of power to men like "Bill" Schloss, Sam Mantel and Theodore Dann, is no accident. It is design. It is in fact, community planning, at its best.

Current Comment

Jews Don't Respect Their Rabbis, Rabbi Louis I. Newman Complains—How important are good manners and good breeding? Jews have always believed that many of their problems arise from the uncouth and noisy behavior of other Jews. Someone said to me recently: "Why don't you Jews rise above your tribe and be loyal to your country, America?" The insult was delivered by a Jew himself, who confessed later that he found it hard to deal with the Jewish workers whom he met daily in the garment industry. On further conversation he sought to make amends for his affront, and I am sure he departed a wiser and less prejudiced person—until he enters into conversation with a rabbi again, and believes the time propitious for the venting of spleen and prejudice. Jews are filled with enmities towards their own kin, and demean themselves most unpleasantly because of their origin. Moreover, Jews who have acquired wealth sometimes set themselves up as superior to their synagogue, saying to the rabbi who comes to officiate at a marriage: "Rabbi, you know we are not interested in religion, and, therefore, please make your ceremony brief." I was told of a man who boasted, ten years after his marriage, that he had ordered the rabbi—a personal friend—to speak only a minute to him, and that when the minute had elapsed, he tickled his bride's elbow, made her laugh, and thereby caused the rabbi to end his marriage remarks. Such conduct is, of course, reprehensible and shows that there are Jews who have no respect for their religion and its tradition. They have self-contempt, and this disdain for everything appertaining to Israel carries out to our customs. Modern liberal religion should not be so free that its representatives should be made the target for insults. If Jews do not respect their own faith, how can they expect non-Jews to respect them? They are paid in the coin of their own forging.

Washington Hadassah To Hear Daniel Frisch

Special

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Daniel Frisch, the Mid-west's leading Zionist, will deliver an address to the pre-donor luncheon of the District of Columbia Hadassah chapter next Tuesday, March 18. At night Mr. Frisch, will speak to the Business and Professional Group of Hadassah.

navy. It also works in co-ordination with a city-wide co-ordinating committee set up by the Indianapolis Council of Social Agencies which covers the non-Jewish agencies doing the same type of work. Under this arrangement, a memorandum has been sent to the Fort and the Naval Armory advising them of the facilities available at Kirshbaum Center as well as at other agencies in the city, and offering the facilities of the Kirshbaum Center on a non-sectarian basis.

In addition to the bulletin on regular activities, a schedule of special activities is compiled by the Council of Social Agencies each week and sent to the Fort and Naval Armory.

On Feb. 2, we notified the officials at the Fort and at the Naval Armory that there would be a tea dance at the Kirshbaum Center for which there would be no admission charge, and sent them 75 tickets for distribution. However, none of the boys at the Fort attended. On Feb. 23, the two young men who are mentioned, came to Kirshbaum Center and it was then we first learned that the bulletin announcing the tea dance on Feb. 2 had not been removed from the bulletin board at the Fort. These boys were shown every courtesy at the Center and were invited to use the facilities of the building and also invited to return for the dance at the building which was to be held later in the evening, which they declined to do.

At the moment, there are very few Jewish boys at the Fort. As you know, the Fort is a reception center for draftees and officials at the Fort do not want us to do anything for these draftees who are only there three or four days and are very busy the entire time they are there. We have been trying for some time to get a list of the Jewish boys that were permanently stationed but have not been able to do so but expect to have this in the next few days. As soon as we receive this our various sub-committees will contact these boys and do exactly what you suggest—invite them to meals, dances and entertainments. We have quite an elaborate program worked out to take care of a much larger number of boys if and when they are at the Fort.

In the meantime, I want to reassure you, however, that notices of all our activities are sent to the Fort and the Naval Armory every week and all boys, either Jewish or non-Jewish, are invited to avail themselves of the same. Later on, as soon as we can get the names of the boys, specific invitations will be extended to all Jewish boys.

Very truly,

J. J. KISER.

Chairman.

Army and Navy Committee.

EDITOR'S NOTE—The list of Jewish boys at Fort Harrison which Mr. Kiser refers to, was finally made available, showing only six Jewish soldiers at the Fort at the present time.
